The past happened. History is what we make of it.

What does it mean to study the past? The philosophy of history addresses both the methodology of studying the past, and the production of meanings about the past. In this class, we will read primarily twentieth-century western authors (and a few of their nineteenth-century antecedents) who have been influential in shaping western historical practice and thought. We will also consider how images and film shape historical consciousness.

Success in this course absolutely depends upon doing the reading: these texts are the primary sources for an intellectual history of historical thought, and students will learn how to critically assess them for what they can tell us about the past, as well as how they can help us think about history in the present. We will devote class sessions to discussion of the texts as well as visual primary sources.

TEXTS

Required books are available at the UA Bookstore:
Marc Bloch, The Historian's Craft
Friedrich Nietzsche, The Use and Abuse of History
Carolyn Steedman, Landscape for a Good Woman

ASSIGNMENTS

CLASS PARTICIPATION

Students are required to read all assigned texts in advance of the class meeting for which it is assigned, take good notes, and be prepared to discuss the contents in detail. To assist preparation for discussion, students will regularly write one-page reading responses.

Reading responses are limited to one typed page (12 pt Times Roman font, double-spaced) of questions and reflections on the assigned reading. Do not summarize the reading; a better response will focus on one topic or related topics that interested you. Use quotes from the text as examples or evidence to support a point. You may cite your sources either as (author, page) at the end of the sentence, or with footnotes.

ATTENDENCE

If you know you will have to miss a class for legitimate reasons, you are expected to inform the instructor in advance and receive an excused absence. Only students who have excused absences on reading response due dates may make up the assignment by writing a response for another day’s reading and handing it in on the day that reading is assigned. Other late papers will be assessed a letter grade reduction penalty.

The accumulation of more than three absences may result in a reduction in your final grade. The accumulation of more than four unexcused absences may result in an administrative withdrawal from the course.

All holidays or special events observed by organized religions will be honored for those students who show affiliation with that particular religion. Absences pre-approved by the UA Dean of Students (or Dean’s designee) will be honored.

PAPERS:
All written work should be formatted in 12-pt Times Roman font with standard margins and double spaced.

1) Two 5-7 page papers will be written on the assigned readings and will not require additional research (minimum six full pages, maximum 8 full pages).
2) Final Project (5-7 full pages or alternative format): Students will choose a topic that they can associate with collective memory (for themselves, or for their families) and discuss it in relation to the relevant assigned readings.

All writing assignments must be submitted electronically to D2L Dropbox before the beginning of the class in which they are due. All writing assignments must also be submitted as hard copy during the class in which they are due.

GRADES
2 Papers: 25% each
Class participation (reading responses, active participation in discussion): 25%
Final Project: 25%

You must complete all writing assignments in order to receive a passing grade for the course.
